A GOLFER'S TOURIST GUIDE

Fairways of Oklahoma

244 courses across six regions

From Southern Hills to the Panhandle nines, including the courses we have lost

FIRST EDITION · OCTOBER 2026

Welcome to the First Tee

This is a guide to every golf course in Oklahoma we could find: a road map for a state that has hosted more major championships than most golfers realize, and a working reference for building each course in your game.

It was made for a golfer building these courses in a video game, so it keeps the closed ones too. Each region opens with a map, then lists its 18-hole courses by town, followed by its 9-hole courses. Every entry has the address, course facts, an aerial view, and the scorecard where one is on record.

What the entries mean

Status	Active is believed open. Inactive is closed. Unconfirmed means we could not verify it either way.
Difficulty	Our label, based on slope from the longest rated men's tee: Friendly under 115, Moderate 115–124, Challenging 125–134, Tough 135 and up. It is not an official rating.
Rating / Slope	The USGA-style course rating and slope, from the longest men's tee on record.
Aerial and hole map	Every photo is a USGS public-domain aerial. White lines, numbered red tees and shaded greens appear where volunteers have mapped them on OpenStreetMap.
Call ahead	Small-town courses change hands, and many records are years old. Phone first before you drive out, and remember private clubs need a member or an invitation.

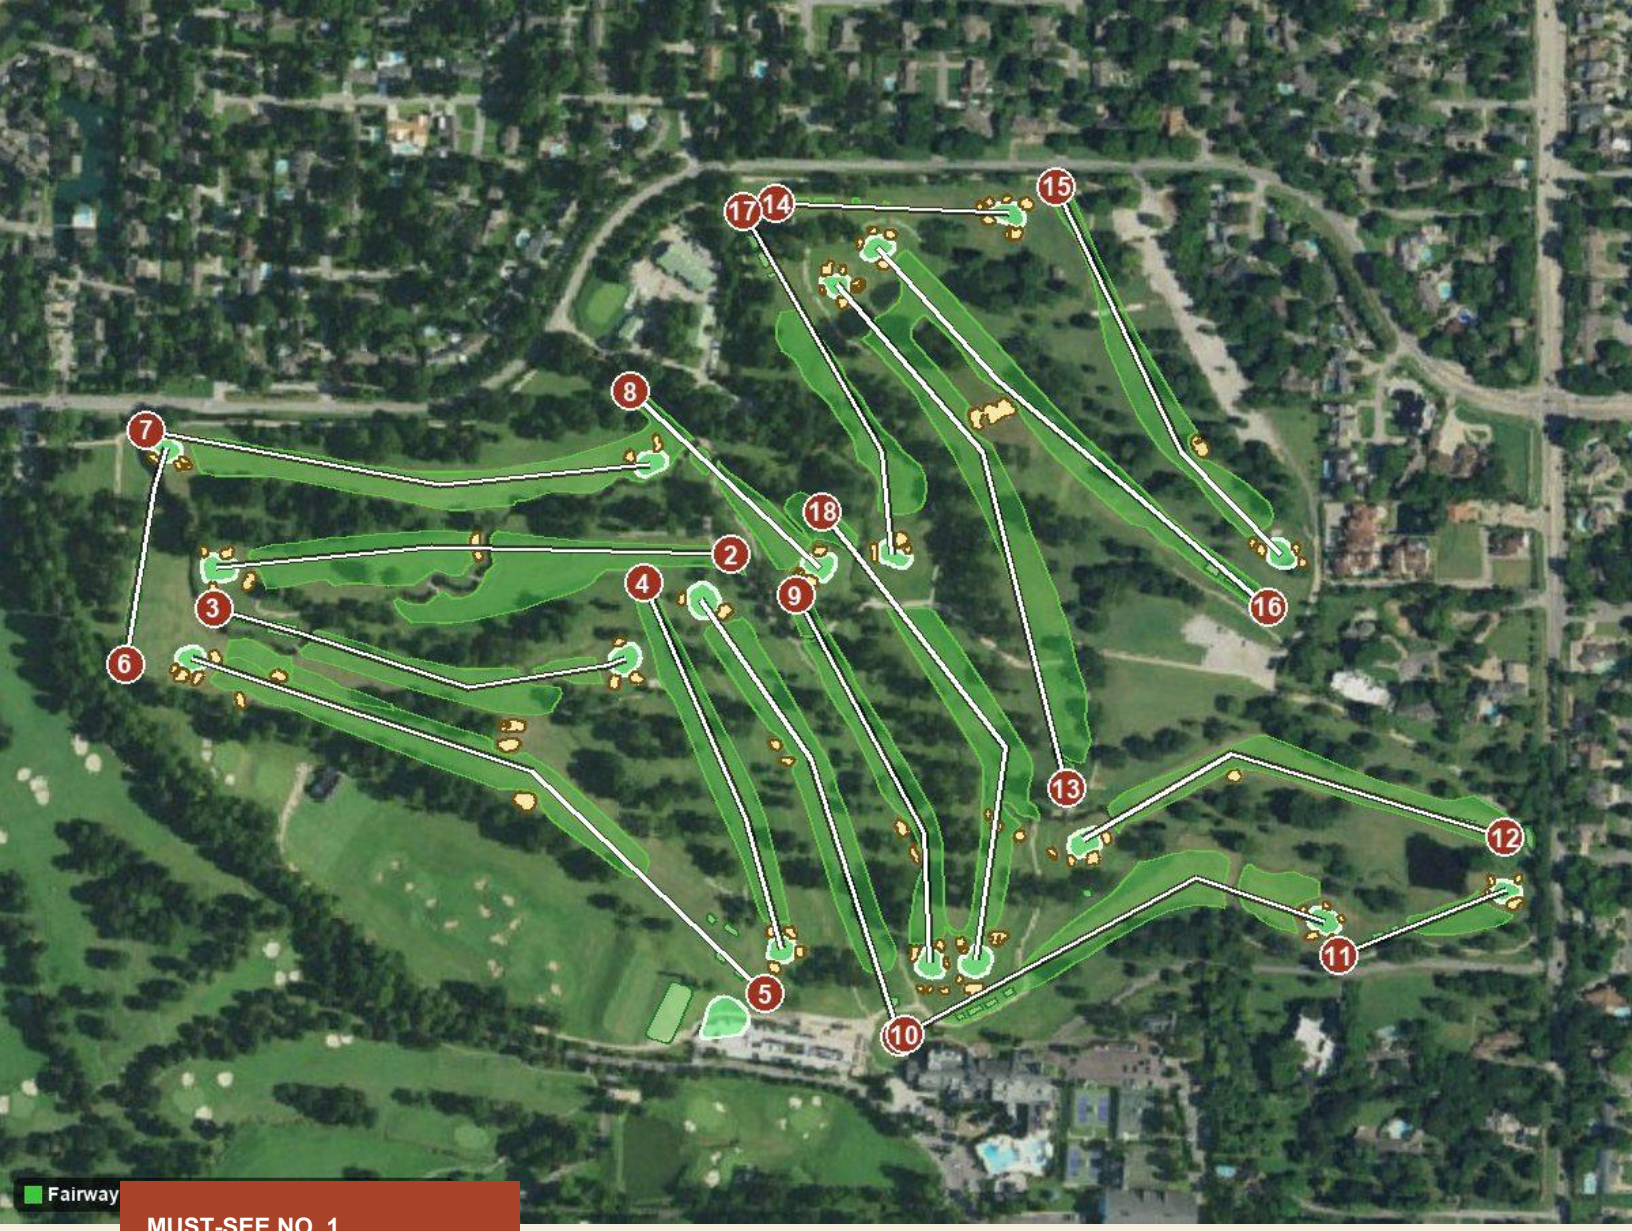
Oklahoma's golf story starts in May 1900, when records suggest the first rounds in the territory were played at Guthrie. Perry Maxwell then built his first course at Ardmore in 1913 and went on to shape Southern Hills, Twin Hills, Oklahoma City Golf & Country Club, Hillcrest, Muskogee, Ponca City and Shawnee. A.W. Tillinghast added Tulsa Country Club and The Oaks, and modern names like Pete Dye and Tom Fazio followed.



MUST-SEE NO. 1

Southern Hills Country Club

2636 East 61st Street South, Tulsa, OK 74136

Perry Maxwell's masterpiece, and the state's most decorated course: three U.S. Opens and five PGA Championships. Gil Hanse renovated it in 2019, ahead of its 2022 PGA Championship. Very private, but you have probably watched it on TV.

Country

Northwest Oklahoma and the Panhandle, where the sky gets big and the wind becomes a fifth club. Enid, Woodward and Guymon hold the larger courses, and the far-flung nines out here are some of the state's best-kept secrets for a road trip.

Credits and a Note on the Data

Course records come from OpenGolfAPI, which is built on OpenStreetMap contributors' data (ODbL 1.0). Hole-map lines and shapes are © OpenStreetMap contributors. Aerial images are from the USGS National Map (public domain).

Rankings: Golf Digest's 2025 Oklahoma list as reported by The Oklahoman, plus Top100GolfCourses notes. History: Golf Oklahoma / Oklahoma Golf Association, Oklahoma Historical Society and Wikipedia. Other directories checked: Stymie, Chronogolf, TravelOK, GolfPass and Foretee.

A few honest limits. Yardages, ratings, status and contact details can be out of date. The aerial is centered on the mapped location and can show neighboring land. Where two courses share a property, their hole lines may appear on each other's map. Several inactive courses rest on a single source. Region borders are simplified from Oklahoma's six tourism regions. Scorecards show the longest tee on file and passed a check on hole count, hole order and par. A spot check of 12 older cards against other sites matched on every par, though those sites may share data. The spreadsheet records each card's source.

Ground-level photos are included only where the license allows it. Check each club's own website for clubhouse pictures.
